Out Of Touch

To the Editor: I note in the August 23 Louisville Times that a new anti-Castro band has been organized to "wage war" against the new Cuba. There are now more than 600 such groups, each with its own candidate for President. Like other exile groups they will do nothing except collect money from gullible Americans, the C.I.A. and rich Cuban counterrevolutionaries still dreaming of regaining their status of privilege and ill-gotten wealth on the island that no longer has a place for their kind.

The truth is that the exiles have lost touch with reality. Their Cuba of the easy peso, the corrupt public official and servility to the high and the mighty, foreign and domestic, has gone with the wind of revolution.

As for military action against Cuba, the exiles have no stomach for it. This was demonstrated at the Bay of Pigs when the bulk of the invaders retired without orders at the first sound of Cuban artillery and surrendered en masse to Castro's peasant militia when it finally caught up with them at the water's edge.

So you can add to the long list of those who say they would do battle with social-reform-bent Cuba this latest clutch of disgruntled renegades who will make a lot of noise, collect a lot of money and pick up a headline here and there to further their purposes.
